

As a result of the national debate over the definition of marriage and especially the redefining of marriage as an institution, “our society embraced the idea that (1) living ‘authentically’ is the greatest thing a person can do....[Further,] we accepted the notion that (2) the differences between men and women weren’t significant enough for the law to be concerned about.”

—Joseph Backholm—