

Bev Nathaniel Sullivan

Great observations, Micah. Unfortunately, even in 1973, certain myths about the federal government, and the Supreme Court in particular, already were entrenched. One myth is that the Constitution means whatever the Supreme Court says it means, regardless of what it says. How can we effectively insist on what the Constitution says when it and the "high and mighty court" conflict? One thing that MUST happen is that states must defy the federal court, under the Constitution. But another myth has taken over, and that one says that SCOTUS has absolute authority over the states. Plus we have weak-willed governors and state legislators. Nevertheless, the key remains with the people, and pastors, though they need to take lessons from you.

Like Reply

