

Karl Marx believed that the people exist for the government, but

America's Founding Fathers believed government exists for the people.